Our society rests to a large extent both on man's inherent right to personal sovereignty and on the coordinate belief in unisonant collectivity. This mutuality of the group and the individual is an important, meaningful interrelationship. Each of us has a degree of uniqueness; all of us have aptitudes and abilities. Every new thought, every idea, every project, and every piece of work that we produce, or merely conjure, has its own merit and worth. Yet there is a limit to what one person can do, a limit to one man's strength and one man's motivation. Unless there is some central body to which we can refer ideas or direct contributions, then all become less meaningful and all become less effective. As long as man lives alone he will remain a shadow; only through cooperation and unity can he shed light on his problems and his ignorance. Security, momentum, gratification—these the group offers to the individual; implementation, perspective, diversification—these the individual supplies to the group. It is, therefore, this reciprocity of the one to the many and the many to the one, the reciprocity from which springs interest and inspiration, success and achievement, that constitutes the theme of ARISTA '59.

Dedication to
Mr. Paul Koehler

After his graduation from high school at 16, Mr. Koehler embarked on the interesting, eventful career which led to his becoming a symbol of music, warmth, and friendliness here at Great Neck. Mr. Koehler plays 18 instruments, most of them self-taught; he composes, arranges, and sings with an impresario's flair.

The titles, offices, and duties he has held, been awarded, or undertaken include: President of Suffolk Music Educators Association, Honorary President of Westchester Music Association, Vice-President of Nassau Music Educators Association, instructor in music education at Columbia Teachers' College, Assistant Conductor of Great Neck Symphony, All-American soccer player, husband, and father. When not leading the band, conducting the orchestra, training the Kilties, or putting the Twirlers through their paces, Mr. Koehler dabbles in art. A caricaturist of some stature and an avant-garde oilist, Mr. Koehler's quiet yet irrepressible sense of humor and deep appreciation of beauty shine through in his art and in everything he does. Mr. Koehler is the embodiment of ARISTA's theme. It is to him that the 1958-1959 ARISTA is dedicated.

"Hey, Friend, you say these are the golden years, and you want to preserve small mementos of them for posterity? Then get a yearbook." This was the Arista salesman's answer plagiarized from Plato for the Layman. The way to stop vandalism of "small mementos" in school was with a yearbook. Now there would be no more thefts of desk tops with carved initials, football jerseys, starting blocks, Prom decorations, or pieces of Polo Road parking places. The "golden years" would be put into uneradicable print.

In 1921 Arista was given its name, which means "bristly hair," to match racoon coats and crewcuts, then and now the rage. Despite this brilliant feat of nomenclature, the next thirty years were stormy for Arista. Only tradition and the fear that the editors might wind up roaming the streets at night smothered resurgent waves of iconoclasm which threatened the yearbook publication. Finally, after many torturous editions, from the sagacity of the Harry-and-Bert team of Steindler and Bloch came the answers to Arista's troubles. Inspired by these stalwart editors, managers and department heads set about to create Arista '59. Photos were taken and many were rejected; some were cut out of LIFE. Later tired bloodshot eyes scanned prints to single out identifying pieces of anatomy and to attach the correct name to sardined students. Bits of abstract art adorned the pages; pictures were affixed with appropriately cryptic clauses. Ingenious copy was devised.

This is the product. . . .

GENERAL ORGANIZATION

Mike Schwartz, President

"I see that the G. O. is contemplating its navel again." This rather graphic reference to the General Organization's perpetual quest for change will grate its officers no more, for such a comment can no longer be made. As the year began, our student government, categorically opposed to structural changes, assured us that its form mattered far less than how, and for what, this form was to be used. Guided by this principle, blessed with a new constitution, and endowed with the advice and admonitions of Mr. Lincoln, were Mike Schwartz, Paul Shapiro, Judy Prager, and Pete Fidel, all of whom were elected through the use of the first automatic voting machine in the school's history. Mike lent his matchless genius and unbounded enthusiasm to the coordinating council and other G. O. projects; Paul, assisted by General Henry M. Robert, presided over the legislative assembly; Pete, admired for his frugality, could usually be found twirling the dials on the G. O. safe; while Judy kept sorted, and filed records of it all.

At mid-year the G. O. formed two temporary investigatory committees. (Some said this group was soon going to be looked into by a Permanent Committee for the Investigation of Temporary Investigatory Committees, but these people, just ingrates, were not taken seriously.) The first carefully chosen group renovated Great Neck's clubs, raising them from the squalor of Antediluvian policies to a more realistic and efficient position. The second collection of inquisitors dedicated themselves to the revision of our stubby G. O. ticket.

The students turned out in full force to support permanent committees. The American Field Service arranged for a foreign visitor in '59-'60, conducted a panel discussion by exchange students of the Metropolitan area, and staged a swinging jazz party. The Assembly Planning Committee engineered several highly diverting and educational assemblies. The Cafeteria, Publicity and Student Relations bodies also performed their duties conscientiously and with fruitful results (although the cafeteria mural remained unchanged). Socially speaking this was a boom year (aren't they all, all

AMERICAN FIELD SERVICE

In 1918 the "Great War" ended and it seemed ridiculously obvious that another one would never sweep the world. At that time members of a military service organization who had removed the wounded from battlefields conceived an idea designed to bolster world-wide understanding.

The group initiated their plan by bringing students from foreign countries to the United States to gain a first-hand knowledge of our country. Several years later, the organization, revising its original plan, decided that all exchange students should be of high school age. This policy proved to be far more effective, for "teen-agers are able to adapt to new situations more easily," explained Alicia de la Peña, Great Neck's 1958-59 exchange student from Argentina.

This idea of an educational and cultural exchange has evolved into what is now known as the American Field Service. This year's local A. F. S. experiment, under the direction of Ellen Faust and Janie Eisenberg and the sponsorship of Mr. Lincoln, has proved highly enlightening for Alicia, who reports many shattered illusions as a result of her school year here. She has not yet located, for example, that "typical" American ("seven cars . . . materialistic . . . blond wife . . . delinquent children") who is unfortunately presented in too many of our exported movies and novels. Alicia finds that the faults that do exist within our society are readily admitted by us. She prefers elective education and regards Great Neck students as extraordinary in their perception and appreciation of culture.

ALICIA'S FAREWELL

There is a pattern of behavior peculiar to man in the United States determined by many social and historical causes, most of which still escape me. Political power? What is the essence of this power in your country? That is another half-answered question. Then there is the interesting problem of individual neuroses that may lead to dangerous mass psychoses. Are Americans maladjusted or too well adjusted? Are human relations too impersonal? Is there really an utter lack of sensitivity? Some day, maybe I will know.

Terpsichores, named for the Muse of Music, staged a thoroughly interesting, artistic dance recital last March. The first portion of the program was a series of abstract dances choreographed by the club membership and based on Lewis Carroll's Through the Looking Glass. Part II consisted of a group of original dances entitled "Mixed Metaphors." Terpsichore members were selected after passing comprehensive auditions testing their technical ability, their rhythmic sensitivity, and their creativity in the field of dance.

Thursdays were the Big Days. All the torments and frustrations of the week were forgotten as each page slowly began to take form. News staff members busily re-wrote "last minute" news flashes; sports reporters checked their statistics; and feature writers carefully revised their syntax and guessed where commas belonged.

JUNIOR PLAYERS

Junior Players provided an outlet for widely diversified interests and talents; while they learned the ins and the outs of theater production and developed various theatrical skills, Junior Players—painters, carpenters, scriptwriters, and actors alike—shared a desire to experience the thrill and glamor of the stage. Each bimonthly Junior Players meeting was highlighted by the "club program," productions exclusively by J. P. members, for J. P. members. Everyone got a chance to emote.

For the public, Junior Players presented two three-act plays and a children's program. In November John Patrick's warm-hearted comedy, The Curious Savage, was staged; in January children of the community were delighted by The Clown That Ran Away; invigorating spring breezes wafted gently over You Can't Take It With You by Kaufman and Hart.

Supervising the many on-and-off-scene activities were Wendy Shore, president; Jill Schutz, vice-president; and Charley Saunders, business manager. Mr. Borovika was assisted in coordinating and sponsoring the club's activities by Miss Estabrook, Mr. Conger, Mr. Franke, and Mr. Miller, who aided in the areas of costuming, ticket sales, and scenery construction and design, respectively.

There is more to J. P.'s work than audiences imagine. Remember: The air was still, the stage was quiet, when cleaving the hush, one of the actors burst forth with "and let there be light!" Contrary to all precedents, there was no light! To the horror of all concerned, the audience faced a

But everyone commits faux pas, and J. P.'s behind-the-scene members are no exception. Fortunately, they always manage to extricate themselves from tangled wires and popping flash bulbs to apply themselves with savage interest to dance recitals, play productions, assemblies, and other enjoyable activities.

Thespians, 30 hard-workers, were selected from Junior Players on the basis of secret requirements enumerated in the constitution of their national parent society. These honored individuals gave fire and warmth to the Lincoln Day Assembly and regally performed an original play as a fund-raising project for the Mental Health Association.

Under the eagle eyes of Mr. Kehrig, and the crafty leadership of Mike Kalnick, Alpha Hi-Y selflessly and generously offered their time and energy in multitudinous ways. Hi-Y operated the cubicle known as Lost and Found, a spot intimately known to absent-minded students. In memorable fashion the group maintained order at football and basketball games, stood guard over the library, and courageously performed in the Hi-Y-Faculty basketball game. In their eagerness to serve the community, Hi-Yers canvassed G. N. for donations to the North Shore Child Guidance Association and the Retarded Child Fund. They also assisted at the annual North Shore Hospital Fair. An unusual and highly praised innovation was the Hi-Y's paperback book stand.

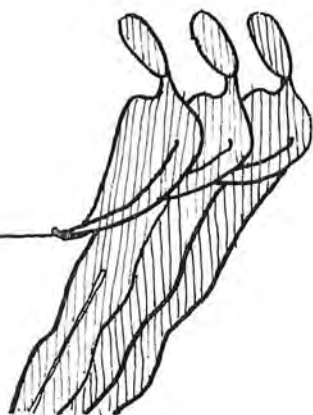

Everyone knows the Hi-Y girl. She is that person for whom you desperately search when you have forgotten your locker key and are ten minutes late for homeroom, the talented courier who delivers messages for the guidance and main offices, the pitchman who sells refreshments at the football games and afternoon snack bar, and the convivial miss who acts as "Hall Hostess." and cake sale; and, as is done each year, awarded two $300 scholarships to well-deserving students.

To cope with its growing obligations and services, the Key Club accepted a larger number of members this year. Together with its customary services of delivering daily papers to home-rooms, ushering at ball games, and operating the football scoreboard, the Key Club began an active service program in the community. In door-to-door campaigns members solicited funds for the North Shore Child Guidance Association, and the Retarded Child Fund, labored at the North Shore Fair and "adopted," a needy family for Christmas. Keymen were rewarded for their services by a deluxe steak dinner sponsored by Kiwanis. The Key Club-sponsored scholarship was greatly enriched through the club's annual faculty softball game.

Boys' Athletic Association, a selective group sponsored by the heads of the boys' gym department, became a more valuable aid to the coaches this year than ever before. The club, radically reorganized under the leadership of Henry Meltzer, Paul Slayton, Bruce Gitlin, and Andy Lewin, assisted the coaches in the planning of intramural and interscholastic sports events, promoted sportsmanship, and encouraged participation in athletic activities.

TAPI

About 500 students who either wanted to render community service, wished to taste the fruits of social work, or just enjoyed being with children became members of TAPI (Teen Aged Pitch In). The members collectively planned and supervised excursions for groups of underprivileged children from the Henry Street Settlement House. Sleepy but enthusiastic Great Neck leaders and energetic youngsters set out Saturday mornings on trips to various points of interest in and around New York City: the Empire State Building, the Planetarium, the circus and NBC studios. In addition, TAPI "adopted a family" recommended by a Manhattan newspaper as a Christmas project.

Although TAPI was partially supported by the PTA, it received the major portion of its funds from dues and voluntary student contributions. Membership entailed compulsory attendance at all meetings and participation in a specified number of trips. All activities were planned and executed entirely by the students under the supervision of Mr. Price.

Although the children were rowdy, the subways were noisy and confusing, and wet feet and weary constitutions often resulted in colds and blisters, members maintained that seeing the smiles on the happy youngsters was ample compensation for their hard work.

Traditionally, all TAPI trips and activities have been characterized by a superabundance of enthusiasm. This year's officers were not severely shocked, however, to find that, upon their battle-scarred, bone-weary return from a typical Saturday excursion, a great many of the active club members were expressing serious doubts as to the real value of their contributions. Did their efforts produce worthwhile results at Henry Street? Thus Mr. Teffereteller, director of Henry Street, came here to speak. His informal lecture and discussion of the value of social work both to the recipient and to the donors was not only of great interest but also of immeasurable value.

Many pithy sayings have been produced concerning books, their lovers and authors, but little has been said of their caretakers: the librarians and library aides. United Nations Youth is a nationally affiliated organization. As stated in its credo, the group's aim is simply "to promote the principles and ideas for which the United Nations stands." Great Neck's diplomats and their entourage upheld this credo with an active program featuring a field trip to the U. N. and a school-wide mock U. N. meeting.

Twenty five girl Treble-ettes filled the air with song, and the boys finally got a voice in music through the 20-man Boys' Choir, organized to increase male participation in choral activities.

G. N. ACE, "MOOSE" MERLINI, COPS AWARDS

Amply rewarded for his brilliant three years of varsity football, Bill Merlini was named to three post-season dream teams. Newsday and the Long Island Press selected Bill as the full-back on their all-Nassau eleven, while the New York Daily News named the Blazer senior as Long Island's top fullback. Bill was further honored by being named to the NSAL Division One first team for the second straight season.

Coach Totura called Bill the most versatile back he has coached in the last five years and also rated him the best player on the North Shore. Bill's value to the Orange and Blue can be shown by his scoring per game. In each of Great Neck's five victories, he tallied at least two touchdowns, while in three losses he failed to reach paydirt. He wound up the season as Nassau's third leading scorer with 92 points, on 14 touchdowns and 8 extra points.

Bill's best performance was in the game with arch-rival Port Washington. After Bill had scored twice to give the Blazers a 14-0 lead, the Portmen rallied to surge ahead 20-14 late in the game. At this point Merlini took over and continually ripped up chunks of yardage, scoring to tie the game 20-20. He then gave Great Neck the victory by plowing through the middle of the Port line for the extra point!

Bill was also a defensive standout from his line backer position. He was consistently a menace to opponent backs with his vicious tackling and his ability all over the field. Bill also called Great Neck's defensive signals. The Orange and Blue captain is expected to have an outstanding football future.

Bill Merlini

FOOTBALL

After stumbling in three of their first four outings, the Blazer eleven found their footing and and finished the season in victorious fashion. Winning their last four games in championship style, Great Neck North placed third in North Shore Division One, the area's toughest league. The chief mainstay of G. N. N.'s team was senior full-back Bill Merlini while Ed Johnson and Ed Sussman, defensive bulwarks, each chalked up over 60 tackles. Joel Feldman, sophomore half-back and second leading ground gainer, and Paul Slayton, senior field general, played major roles in the Blazer offense. Linemen Jim Blume, Jeff Spanier, Bill Sloane, and Bob Bachor were standouts all season long both offensively and defensively.

G. N.'s ardent fans watched a hard, thrilling season of football. Mr. Totura emphatically described this year's eleven as "the most improved team I have ever coached."

With eleven players returning, next year's squad will lack depth. Yet, if some of the boys up from J. V. make the grade and returning veterans stay healthy, the season should be another successful one.

Though they recorded a scant two wins while tying three contests, and losing three, Great Neck's J. V. team "went a very long way on a very short amount of experience," according to Coach Levy.

Barry Feldman, second string junior varsity signal caller, did an excellent job of quarterbacking the first few games. Roger Seamon, who followed him at the quarterback slot, half-backs Gene Hutchinson and Mike Bernstein, and fullback Bill Thurston composed the team's regu-

Coach Liquori's squad, finishing an eventful soccer season with an 11-1-2 record, was barely booted out of the Division championship. Feared by all of its opponents for its superb defense, Great Neck North unfortunately lacked a comparably strong offensive unit. Blazer forwards who saw regular action were Mike Charles, Henry Meltzer, and Bob Contigulia. The Blazer's impenetrable defense, which led the squad to eight shut-outs, included halfbacks Bruce Gitlin (co-captain) and Jim Balassone. Junior goalie Terry Finkel was a star performer in every game. Gitlin, the team's high scorer, and Balassone distinguished themselves by being named to the All-Star Scholastic Soccer Team, while Contigulia, Altman, and Finkel received honorable mention.

Our J. V. soccer team finished the season in high fashion with a 5-5-2 record. The campaign closed with an unbeaten streak of four games and ties with the divisions' two top teams, Garden City and North Shore. Coach Pierzga's booters were handicapped by having no full-time goalie. Pete Mayland and converted forwards Bob Miller and Bob Trouner admirably shared the goal-tending duties. The team's forté was its fine defense led by fullbacks Tommy Hahn, Ivan Weissman and Eddie Causin. Outstanding halfbacks were Jeff Simons, Tom Collin, Bob Figman, Den Hodor, and Mike Pollack. Mike Lewis, Dave Weschler, and Bob Seamon led the squad's forward line.

Hampered by a lack of returning cross country lettermen, the Harriers nevertheless ended their season with a commendable 3-2 record. After an initial 32-23 victory over Hicksville, Coach Ring's hill and dalers began to "work at running." Having defeated Westbury, Great Neck bowed to Garden City in its next meet. The Harriers then copped second place in a triangular meet against Port Washington and Roslyn. In the North Shore Championships, the season's final event, the Blazers placed sixth in a top-flight field of 13 teams. Captain Joel Lauchner, Stu Goldberg, Bob Kirk, Paul Blank and Bill Eck led the team.

One of the year's most successful sports for the Orange and Blue was Varsity tennis. Coached by Mr. Thiergard, the Blazers gained second place in Division One by winning nine matches while losing only two, both losses inflicted by the league champions, Garden City.

Mickey Geringer, four-year veteran, played a strong first singles; Joel Paschow, a junior, finished undefeated. Captain Dick Levine, Steve Spahn, Don Bloch, George Ross, Marc Fasteau, and Stuart Leventhal were other singles players during the year. Eric Gruenstein, Chet Solomon, Mike Saphier, Bill Friedman, and Ron Rebhuhn, in various combinations, made up Great Neck's doubles teams.

BASKETBALL

Led by the shooting of Steve Spahn, the ball-handling and passing of Paul Slayton and Jimmy Cohen, and the rebounding of Jim Blume, Jeff Spanier, and Roger Trupin, the '58-59 varsity basketball squad made Coach Morrison's first varsity season an exciting, successful one. Throughout the campaign the Blazers showed themselves able to rise to the occasion and win "big games"; they were a third-quarter, come-from-behind ball club.

After losing to Port Washington, Glen Cove and Garden City, the Blazers needed four successive wins in their four final games. After three crucial victories, Great Neck whipped Garden City in a return engagement to tie with the Trojans for first place spot in the N. S. A. L. Division One. The Blazers finished with a 9-3 league record and an over-all mark of 14-4.

In the annual post-season county tournament the Blazers reached the quarter finals, decisively routing Hewlett before losing to Baldwin. In the Golden Wave contest the Orange and Blue rallied in the closing minutes to cut the deficit from 16 to 3 points, before losing a tight 61-56 decision.

A trisket, a trasket . . .

Steve Spahn had a banner year by breaking his own all-time Great Neck scoring record with 408 points. The lanky senior further distinguished himself by gaining a place on the Nassau County All-Scholastic First Team.

Ken Miller, Larry Dubin, Ron Moss, Jim Wolosoff, Fred Fisher, and Bob Chaikin gave Great Neck the great depth for which it was known.

The J. V. basketball squad kept up Great Neck's tradition by producing a 15-3 season record. The Blazer five, coached by Mr. Pierzga, lost only to Hicksville, to Port Washington (in overtime), and to Mineola. All losses were duly avenged in return matches.

A standout on the squad was Fred Branfman. Playing in the corner, Fred broke the all-time Great Neck J. V. total scoring record. The team as a whole was unusually strong. Larry Solomon, Steve Richman, Richard Klein, Lloyd Harris, Larry Dougherty and Mike Saphier were star performers in their own right.

WRESTLING

Considerably handicapped by a small turnout of experienced wrestlers, Coach Levy's Varsity grapplers produced an overall record of no wins and ten losses. The Blazers, a young team composed mainly of 10th and 11th graders, did manage to show decided improvement during the season. The outstanding wrestler on the team was Mike Okin, a key returning letterman from last year's winning squad. Mike had a 5-2 league match record. Other grapplers who turned in commendable performances were seniors Steve Frank, Adrian Meyers, Sandy Edelman and Fred Abeles; juniors Harry Wein and Joe Wasington; and Rick Vachio, a sophomore. Next year's outlook is far more rosy.

BASEBALL

A strong pitching brigade supported by a solid defensive unit formed the core of the 1959 Blazer varsity baseball squad. The lineup's two most successful hurlers were Jeff Spanier, a fast-balling righthander, and Dave Tucker, who, though he didn't speak softly, carried a really big stick, led the Orange and Blue at the plate.

Prominent Blazer pitcher Vic Zinn, a junior righty, Adrian Meyers, and Richard Oshins saw action in relief roles. Coach Casey's catchers, veteran Steve Beckerman and junior Tony Handal, called wicked signals. The slick-fielding Great Neck infield was a group that intimated great things to come next year.

Although hampered greatly by various agencies, Coach Casey, in his first year at the Varsity helm, was successful in moulding a squad of only six returning lettermen into a cooperative winning team.

The J. V. baseball team floundered at first from inexperience. As the season wore on and the squad gained assurity, the nine J. V. men did their uniforms proud. Sophomores and juniors were readied for shouldering the burden of Varsity chores next year.

BOWLING

After tying for first place in Division One of the North Shore Bowling League, the varsity Keglers, coached by Mr. Ring, captured third place in the county sectionals at Hempstead.

The Blazer squad was chosen anew each week, its ranks filled from intramural bowlers. Great Neck opened its NSAL defense by successfully defeating the Island Trees Bulldogs 4-1. Once started, there was no stopping G. N. The pin scatterers rolled on to successive victories over Levittown, North Shore, Hicksville and Mineola. At that point the pinmen had racked up 13 consecutive wins. Bad omen or not, Great Neck lost to Farmingdale and Manhasset. The squad found new spark, however, edging Garden City and defeating Port Washington to tie for first.

The outstanding Great Neck bowler was Pete Marcus, whose 185 average for six games in the Sectionals placed him third in the county. Richard Gluckman, Bill Dinkes, Steve Gold, Ira Koondel, and Roland Dorhoffer consistently scored high.

Representing Great Neck in the dashes were veterans Ed Sussman, Chet Salomon, and Gene Hutchinson. Soph newcomer Roger Seaman was a surprise but welcome flash. Terry Finkle, Jon Siegel, and Mike Charles did an outstanding job on, nay, over the hurdles. Joel Lauchner, Dick Fried, and Stu Goldberg comprised the backbone of our distinguished distance squads.

High jumping for Great Neck were Nate Taylor and Fred Fisher. Pole vaulters Ken Shapiro and Joel Lauchner excelled in their event. Sussman and Siegel were the Blazers' chief scorers at the broad jump pit. K. Altman put the shot; R. Moss and R. Goldman twirled the discus. A large, hard-working "en masse" gave reassuring depth to Great Neck's field and track squads.

At a single glance even the untrained eyes could separate the girls of Leaders' Corps from the rest of the gym classes. It was not necessarily by their superior school records, however, that their true identity was divulged, but by their gleaming, or not so gleaming white uniforms. Each leader assumed the pleasant duties of searching the locker room for stray pocket books, instructing gym classes in athletic arts, and making peace between enemy gym teams.

Leaders' Corps receives assistance and financial support from Girls' Athletic Association. The Corps has formulated a long range plan to raise money: the production of a movie starring Great Neck girls. The girls would demonstrate the skill and techniques of basketball; shooting, passing, dribbling, and posing for pictures.

The Girls' Athletic Association, in addition to collecting dues, serves as a student check on the girls' physical education department. Specifically, G. A. A.ers regulate and revise the intramural program and point system and supervise the planning of interschool activities.

April Showers brought the G. A. A. Penny Carnival and May flowers. By charging a few pennies for a few hundred calories, and by offering frustrated students a chance to play Voodoo with a salami, to throw sponges, legally, at arch enemies, and to bet on the races, hamster races, G. A. A. amassed over $100.

G. A. A., the parent organization to Terpichore and Leaders Corps, transacted its vital business at bi-monthly board meetings.

The cohesion and dynamics of a great percentage of school activities are directly contingent upon the dedication and earnestness of sponsors and advisors. More than an agent of administrative authority, the faculty sponsor serves as a conduit directing the production and aims of groups and of individuals.

Mr. Howell supervised decoration planning and application for all proms and dances. His coordinative control and subtlety conveyed ideas accounted for the brilliance—in color and in atmosphere—of these events. The mock U. N. assembly, a tremendous project, was facilitated largely through Mr. Davis' energy and experience. Insight owes its success in good measure to

As a pale September sun crept lazily over the horizon, the four hundred filed into the building to meet in one room. Who were they? Why were they here? They were here because it seemed the logical place to go, and, as for their identity, they called themselves tenth graders, the Class of 1961.

Within two weeks the four hundred wayfarers suddenly became "sophs," finding themselves outnumbered two to one by juniors and seniors. Defense was essential! From undercurrents of dismay and fear an organization appeared which adopted Mike Lewis, Dave Weschler, Rina Chagy and Marilyn Greenman as leaders. The Sophomore Class was following an evolutionary scale which dated back some several eons to the birth of Great Neck High.

In three months the Sophs were so fraught with tension and fatigue from the pressures of high school existence, that, vent on escaping the melee, they migrated to the quiet solitude of "Ski Lodge," which was about as quiet as two hundred sophs at a party could make it. A week later the class of "wise fools" was to be heard mumbling something about sixty-one minutes. It was soon discovered that no radical change in the established system of time keeping was being planned, but that the Sixty-first Minute was the carefully thought out title of the class newspaper.

As time passed, tenth graders settled down with their noses to the grindstone, which hurt. But relief came in the spring when charitable sophomore collators shared their franks with the local ants, who somehow never fail to remember the date of the "soph" picnic.

Now having fought the battle, the class of '61 looks ahead. But where does the hard climb lead to? Eventually becoming college freshmen, of course, and starting at the bottom of the heap all over again!

JUNIOR CLASS

Never has there been a class with a career so intricately involved as that of the Class of 1960. After five years of double session, various schisms and boundary changes, the original class now stand divided . . . each side proudly flying its flag on its respective side of the Mason-Dixon Line. Novus ordo seclorum . . .

Though the rebels boast a bright, new building, Northerners have dignified traditions. Yet it was a challenge for the juniors to attain individuality. Chosen to lead this struggle were Jeff Siegel, Gene Cederbaum, Jane Seitz, and Jim "Work" Balassone.

December found the Juniors blissfully hula-hooping at their class party and beginning to feel the first traces of college heat. The major step in the Class's campaign toward unity came in February. An imposing Greek temple, weekdays the boys' gymnasium, became the scene of the Junior Prom. The huge turn-out for this Elysian Paradise exceeded the most optimistic expectations, and the rainy weather of this Valentine's Day, the most pessimistic. Eric Gruenstein and Pat Jaffe, crowned the royal couple, danced with their subjects to a professional 12-piece student band and laughed at a spontaneous, rollicking entertainment program.

In early April, Junior fingers became the most peered at objects in the school (next to Junior beauties) when class rings made their first appearances. In addition to the Party, Prom, and Picnic, the Juniors had the Paper, Target 60. Mr. Durfee, class sponsor, served as faculty advisor, an euphemistic substitution for censor to Rena Prestin and Steve Rosenfeld, co-editors. The paper was crammed full, artistically of course, with evidence of Juniors' creativity.

By June, the Class of '60 had built up considerable momentum. This should not imply that the group just rolled merrily on its way, for, as school shut its doors with the help of the custodial staff, the class had become a united, purposeful group.

Sorry, wrong tent.

SENIOR CLASS

Fore! Whoops, three!

Emily Doumaux, Secretary

Jim Blume, Treasurer

Webster defines chess as "a game of pure skill played on a board with sets of sixteen pieces." Seemingly, it was from this game of skill that senior classmen derived an entire night's occupation—"Check-Mate," the senior class party. What was not known, especially to class officers Dick Carsel, Bob Figman, Emily Doumaux and Jim Blume, whom it might have offended, was that the choice of the theme "Checkmate" had been made by certain sedulous senior scholars who had traced the derivation of the term back past Aristotle to the times of Af-rid'l El Neuman. An ancient Arabian insectologist of some fame, this ancient seer, reading in the tabloids about gift-giving during the election year 450 B.C., muttered, "Al-shah mat," or "the king is done for," or "Checkmate." However, despite the party's ominous appellation, a nondescript party pooper reminded the seniors that they were led not by a king but by a president, and so Af-rid'l El Neuman's anarchic philosophy was reluctantly dropped. With this revolutionary spirit quelled, the party assumed normal proportions. All subsequent riotous doings were later fully and faithfully recorded by Caesar, of the "Caesar Says" column in Release '59.

With college boards and applications behind them, upperclassmen were able to turn to more serious endeavors, such as balking around with senior licenses (though seniors still had to park their automobiles down the road a piece).

Came the spring, seniors' fancies turned to thoughts of the Senior Prom, only not "lightly" as an oft-quoted saying would have you believe. Perennial problems emerged once more: "The Copa, Stork Club, breakfast party, Jones Beach, Latin Quarter?—or the Latin Quarter, Stork Club, Jones Beach, lunch party, Copa?"

"What's a safe time to leave for the prom, so as not to earn a P. A. announcement, while also managing to catch the entire floor show?"

Still another touchdown

"What do you mean—you don't want to see the Museum of Natural History?"

As the Prom approached, rapid calculator Jim Blume reported that the decorations committee had expended $57.12 on Air-Wicks for the boys' gym. Other trappings, selected with infinite care, transformed well-worn mahogany into shining marble, baskets into chandeliers, and wooden doors into bronze gates. A Grand Ballroom had been created. The Night arrived. It went, too, but that was by no means the end of festivities as the next afternoon's drowsy eyes and blistered feet revealed.

The effects of the Prom remained for weeks, but, eye-lids open to the end, seniors returned for the Senior Banquet and managed to keep awake through graduation exercises showing the stuff true seniors are made of.

With tassels slung casually over their mortar boards and with effort res:training happy smiles, thereby to maintain the solemnity of the occasion, the Class of '59 received their diplomas and embarked upon . . .

And best wishes, Marc.

IT DOESN'T HAPPEN

The Interim Committee ruled supreme pending the election of G. O. officers . . . Enthusiastic students formed a club to bolster school spirit and appropriately named it the Booster Club. Boosters and their famous motor caravans attended all varsity games . . .

Following her return from a tour of the Soviet Union, Eleanor Roosevelt was the guest speaker at a program in the Junior High School. Speaking of America's attitudes toward education, Mrs. Roosevelt stressed the fact that America's educational program must function to its full capacity . . . At the end of October, Harry Golden, author of Only in America, spoke in Great Neck. Mr. Golden's discussion of segregation was sponsored by the American Jewish Congress. His fresh viewpoints and epigrammatic insights made the event a great success . . .

Taking advantage of Brookhaven's invitation, Great Neck students flocked to see the Laboratory's buildings and exhibits. Visitors were not disappointed as they were treated to views of a nuclear reactor and an atom smasher . . . North Shore and L. I. Jewish Hospitals admitted high school students into their laboratories to gain invaluable first-hand experience in the exploration of a myopic world . . . Pupils who disliked or feared receiving report cards found their woes increased seven-fold as a new mark distribution method was initiated on November 12 . . .

With "Education in Russia" as his topic, Dr. Harry Gideonse, President of Brooklyn College, spoke before the student body. Dr. Gideonse urged us to find a set of values which command the respect of the world . . . When the Christmas Vacation skidded to a halt, Seniors returned to school sporting the latest campus fashions. Ivy Leaguers found that their wardrobes were incomplete without the possession of colored pencils to be worn over the ear to match the shirt . . . Notebooks were replaced by lighter and more efficient clipboards. "I know I did my homework, but I can't seem to find it" . . . John Gielgud's "The Ages of Man" captivated student and adults alike. Approved by Great Neck critics, Sir John then took his one man show to Broadway, receiving unprecedented acclaim . . . Nebishes waddled (or do they run?) to the most successful G. O. Dance in school history on January 24. Scheming committee chairmen outdid Madison Avenue in their devices to sell the product of their efforts . . . Everyone had a copesetic evening.

Classes were held on Lincoln's Birthday. This tradition-breaking occasion was heralded by a sudden measles epidemic. Those spared by the scourge were rewarded with an extended snack period in which anarchists led in the singing of Civil War ballads . . . Tenth's grades and Seniors were treated to an assembly program featuring representatives from Syracuse's and Pittsburgh's debating teams. A week later the Dartmouth Glee Club entertained by proudly singing of the school's founder, Eleasar Wheelock, and "his 500 barrels of good New England rum" . . .

The mock U. N. meeting convened. The splendor of foreign nations was revealed through native dress; concomitant crises were precipitated as Latin American delegations voted with the Communist bloc and as Morocco declared war on France. But, the day was a smashing success as all the problems of the world were duly solved . . . Dr. Frank Graham, former President of North Carolina State College, government official, world citizen, and humanitarian, in an informal but consequential talk, discussed the importance of the U. N. in world affairs . . . G. N.'s Latin teams won two first prizes at N. Y. U.'s Baird Memorial exam . . . It was quite a year.
